Billie Burke Will Star Sunday In Radio Play

By MILDRED MASON
TWO plays, "Rosaland," by Sir James Matthew Barrie and "Skyscraper" by Lawrence Sanders, are on the radio bill for Sunday and it will be well worth the while of lovers of radio plays to tune in on either of these presentations. The play "Rosaland" is an excerpt from Barrie's book "Half Hours." Billie Burke, famous stage and screen star, will play the leading role and will be supported by Ivor Novello, young British playwright and actor. The play will be heard on the RCA-Victor program over the NBC network, through WSAI, Cincinnati, from 7:30 to 8 p. m.

The other play "Skyscraper" has been acclaimed by radio critics as the outstanding radio drama of many months. The play was presented February 11 and because of popular demand is being repeated. It is the story of two riveters working thirty stories above the street. They are both in love with the same girl. One of them falls. Whether or not it is accidental is unknown but it is the man's thoughts while falling thirty stories to his death that make the story. This will be heard over the NBC network through WSAI, New York, and affiliated stations from 10:15 to 10:45 p. m.

BILLIE BURKE

story of 106 grand operas and 1,000 songs in their original languages.

Program Extended
Maurice Chevalier, noted French stage and screen star, who is guest artist of the Chase and Sanborn program every Sunday evening over the NBC network through WSAI, Cincinnati, will, beginning March 8 be heard in an hour's program from 8 to 9 o'clock instead of the usual half-hour period.

Radio Sales Slump
Sales of radio receivers for 1930 numbered 3,828,000, exceeding expectations, although 610,000 under 1929. It was announced Thursday by O. H. Caldwell, editor of Radio Retailing. The favorable showing was due to the popularity of the midget and to drastic price reductions, according to Caldwell. Total retail set sales volume in dollars slumped 44 per cent to $332,198,000 for 1930 as against $592,000,000 for 1929.

Opera Star Is Guest
Elisabeth Rethberg, lyric and dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., will be guest artist of the Atwater Kent Hour Sunday evening at 9:15 o'clock over the NBC network through WSAI, Cincinnati. Miss Rethberg's renown is worldwide. Her American season is followed annually by one in Europe. She has a reputation of 106 grand operas and 1,000 songs in their original languages.

Both sides hired expensive lawyers.

COUPLE KILLED AT RAILWAY CROSSING

CLEVELAND, March 6.—Probe of the Bedford grade crossing tragedy which took the lives of Isadore P. Wise, 60, and his wife, Hattie, 55, was to be instituted today by county authorities.

The couple was instantly killed when the small sedan in which the two were riding flashed past the red warning lights at the crossing on the path of the Cleveland-bound Pennsylvania passenger train.

The automobile was smashed into fragments. One part of it was thrown into a telephone pole which was snapped into two pieces. The woman's body was found 150 feet down the track where it had been carried by the speeding train before the engine came to a stop. Wise's body was found near the crossing.

It was believed that the victims failed to notice the flashing warning signals.

COUNTY AUDITOR TO EXPLAIN APPRAISAL

Plans for the county-wide reappraisal of real estate in Greene County this year will be explained in full by County Auditor James C. Curlett at a called meeting of members of the Xenia City Commission, all school boards, township trustees and representatives of all Grange and Farm Bureaus to be held next Wednesday.

The joint conference will be held at 1:30 o'clock in the Court House assembly room and is being arranged preliminary to the appointment of appraisers who will have charge of the task of revising the valuations of property.

Fuller interested himself in Garlough's case and as a result of his efforts the government was prevailed upon Thursday to settle the Greene County ex-service man's disability claim in full.

The $3,000 Garlough will receive immediately represents back pay due him since the date of his discharge from the army in 1919. The claim is the largest which Mr. Fuller has ever settled for a local veteran, he said.

The service officer also announced that Footy Post headquarters in the basement of the Court House will be open all day Saturday, as well as next Monday and Tuesday, to enable those Greene County veterans who have received government loans on their adjusted compensation certificates to have their checks scrutinized in cases where veterans believe they have been underpaid.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 6.—Petition in error for appeal of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube-Bethlehem Steel Corporation merger decision was on file in the district court of appeals today.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands, in every thing. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it—Ephesians, v, 24, 25.

TOO MANY RELATIVES

It really isn't surprising that long standing and persistent complaints have finally crystallized in the house bill introduced by Representative Stone of Oklahoma, forbidding senators and representatives to appoint relatives to jobs in their offices. The complaints by clerks who are not relatives of the great (?) men for whom they labor, that they are obliged to do all the drudgery for a pittance, while others get most of the money allowed by law for office help, probably have a good deal of foundation. Certainly the protests hitherto, if not loud, have been deep and rumbling with earnestness. But even so, it is a little difficult to see how Mr. Stone's bill is going to get much of anywhere as a piece of legislation.

From the standpoint of statutory enactment the situation is a little difficult. The question at issue is a question of private decency more than it is a question of public morality. There is nothing intrinsically wrong in the act of a senator or representative who chooses to hire his wife or his son, or his brother or some other relative to act as secretary or clerk in his office. If the person employed is competent, does the work and earns the pay allowed, what's to be said? Indeed, it is easy to see why there are cases when a member of congress may feel himself best served by employing somebody close to him through ties of blood, and who consequently can be trusted to work for his interests and keep his secrets.

Unfortunately, it seems to be pretty plain that in a number of cases that is not the motive which inspires lawmakers to try to "keep the money in the family." If the protesting clerks are accurate in their statements, there are instances where distribution of the allowance for office help amounts to a sort of legal graft involving the application of near sweatshop methods to the employees doing actual work. That sort of thing is highly reprehensible, and indicates moral infirmity on the part of the senators or representatives indulging in it. But whether a law such as that proposed by Mr. Stone will help matters much is another question. For those who want to try the trick, there is always a way of beating the devil around the stump, and the members of congress who now practice open nepotism of a vicious sort will merely resort to the practice of secret and indirect nepotism if they are prevented by law from continuing their present practice. The remedy for whatever abuse exists, is the inculcation of a higher notion of ethics among members of congress—if possible.

Shouldn't the beginning of reform legislation be a law forbidding legal regulation of any individual's personal conduct, so long as he does not commit a crime or make himself a public nuisance?

NATURE'S WAY

It will pass. In time, this racking, tearing grief will go, leaving you limp, leaving you exhausted almost to death. More's the pity, you think, but it will go and you'll be taking hold again.

You'll lift up your head and go on. You will look around you and see people working. You'll hear them laugh and at first you'll wonder how they can laugh when life is like it is, when it can strike such cruel blows and take away the one whom you have loved most of all.

Some day you will laugh, too. And as you hear that laughter breaking in the air about you, you will be shocked. It will seem to you almost a betrayal of the beloved dead, of your own sacred grief. You didn't think you'd ever laugh again, but here you are—laughing and bearing that grief within you. And you learn, then, that those other people who laughed when you were broken, were once as stricken as you and as certain they would never laugh again. . . . It is nature's way of smoothing the road, and the way is right, and you cannot depart from it.

A BOY WAS KILLED

I remember myself, lying alone beneath a tree some miles behind the front during the war, grieving for a life cut off, and for myself heretofore, and hating everything around me—hating people at home, hating generals and captains and the men who make guns and the men who fire them, hating everything.

I'd heard that a boy was dead. I'd met him only the day before at a crossroad. We'd stopped and talked and we'd remembered things together and he'd laughed in that booming way of his and gone on up toward the front. I think he was killed within an hour and I never even his body again. . . . So I hated all life that sunny afternoon.

LIFE TOOK CARE OF ME

But it passed. Life crowded in with its booming and its dangers, with its excitement and its adventures, and the days carried me along. I didn't forget him. I did not cease to love him. His memory is still alive for me, and I regret his death as much as ever—but he was never one to whine and cower and skulk and why should I have become a skulker because of grieving?

Life took care of me as it will take care of you. Soon you will laugh as you should, and your laughter will be no truer to that blessed memory. Even your grief will become a blessed much in which bitterness cannot grow. It has happened before and it will happen again.

Answers to questions on information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Where is the original copy of the Declaration of Independence kept? Is it on exhibition?

The original copy of the Declaration of Independence and the engrossed original of the Constitution have been transferred from the Library of the State Department to the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., and are on exhibition. Between two pillars on the west wall of the second floor gallery a niche has been cut, in which the Declaration is enshrined. It is protected by a glass which has been chemically treated so as to exclude all injurious light, and in front of the frame is a colored light by which the document may be seen. A case standing on the floor in front of the Declaration contains the Constitution, and protecting the whole is a heavy marble balustrade.

How many school bands and orchestras are there in the United States? There are approximately 40,000 school bands and orchestras in this country.

"Penman of the Revolution" Who was the best-known American writer at the time of the Revolution?

John Dickinson (1732-1808), an American statesman and publicist, known as the "Penman of the Revolution," was the most influential writer at the time of the Revolution. He wrote many state papers, numerous pamphlets and newspaper articles, the most famous of which were the celebrated "Farmers' Letters," published at Philadelphia in 1777. These "letters" had a wide circulation and produced such an effect on both sides of the Atlantic that their appearance has been regarded as "the most brilliant event in the literary history of the Revolution." Dickinson's influence waned after 1776 on account of his opposition to the Declaration of Independence, which he would not sign; but a series of papers written by him (1797-78), under the pseudonym, "Fabius," were widely read and contributed much towards inducing Pennsylvania and Delaware to ratify the Constitution.

Diamond

How large was the largest diamond ever found?

The largest, and in many respects the most remarkable, diamond of which there is any record, was found on January 26, 1905, in the Premier mine near Pretoria, Transvaal. The stone, called the Cullinan diamond from the name of its finder, weighed 3,106 carats, or 137 pounds, and measured 4 inches by 2.5 by 1.25. Its value has been estimated at $2,500,000 to $5,000,000. This diamond was cut into nine stones and presented, in 1908, to King Edward VII to be placed among the English crown jewels. The largest of these is a pendent-shaped brilliant which weighs 519 1/2 carats and is mounted in a removable setting in the scepter.

NEW YORK. — Sax Rohmer, British writer of mystery stories, reached here the other day from London. He stood on the dock with his nose in the air, as if he were wearing a piece of lumber as a stickpin, and proceeded to tell the people of the United States of the wonders of what a top-sided, cock-eyed, half-baked show they're running.

Sax says he's here to study crime conditions. We're sure glad he told us that. If he hadn't explained so carefully just why he made the trip some of us might have gone away with the idea that Sax was here to replenish Ye Olde English Bank Rolles.

LITERARY LIGHTS

There have been a lot of British literary fellows breezing over here, lately. They don't seem to care very much for our habits, customs and style of feed; and they're in no way backward about airing their prejudice. But taken by and large they're a rather decent crew and they've demonstrated this one thing:

The most valuable quality which the average British writing man possesses is the belief that he is above the average.

KAMERAD!

SENATOR-ELECT HULL WILL BE REAL THREAT TO HIGHER TARIFF-ITES

—CHARLES P. STEWART—

WASHINGTON.—Representative Cordell Hull of Tennessee issued a "statement" (as the nation's legislators are in the habit of calling their extra-official utterances on public questions) a few days ago of a sort worth much more serious attention than the average political "handout" from Capitol Hill.

For one thing, it is an important statement because it relates to the tariff, which is a tremendously important, if not a very popularly interesting, subject. Second, it is important because Representative Hull issues it. And Representative Hull not only is one of the country's foremost tariff experts, but the next session of congress will see him in the senate, where it is a foregone conclusion that he speedily will be recognized among the extremely few of a single pair of hands will furnish an ample number of fingers to count them on lawmakers of tip-top ability in Washington.

It would not be correct to say that Senator-elect Hull has not been prominent, even as a member of the house of representatives. He has been as prominent a man as it is possible for a representative to be, under conditions which prevail today in that congressional chamber.

These conditions, however, have reduced all the representatives pretty well to a common level. In fact, except by name, they do not all know one another. As for non-political folk, it is doubtful whether many people are familiar with the reputations of any of them below the rank of Speaker Longworth, Republican Floor Manager Tilson, Democratic Leader Garner, the mighty Chairman Snell of the legislatively almost omnipotent rules committee—are they household words? I question it.

But a senator? A senator is different. If for no other reason than that there are only 96 senators, to 435 representatives, the former stand out more noticeably than the latter.

Not but that there are senators of not particular consequence, for that matter. Still, it is possible for a senator, of the right quality, to show well-nigh as conspicuously as the president. For instance, Senator Borah, Senator Norris, in his way Senator Heflin—"Who's he?" is a question altogether unlikely to be asked when any one of this group happens to be mentioned.

Cordell Hull has been just as able a statesman (and he is fully entitled to credit for real statesmanship) in the house of representatives as he will be in the senate.

Taxation has been his specialty. He was author of the income tax law of 1913; of its revision in 1916; of the federal inheritance tax act.

He can stand punishment, too—he was chairman of the Democratic national committee during his party's dark days from 1921 to 1924, when he had to pledge his personal credit for its office rent.

It should not be understood that the Tennesseean has been a non-entity hitherto, either. He has been presidentially mentioned.

His state knows him, as was demonstrated by his run for the senate; he is pretty well known throughout the south; politicians everywhere know him.

Nevertheless he is not known nationally, as his brains and his services entitle him to be; but he is due to be, mighty soon after the next congress convenes, for he will take his senate seat with all the acquired experience of 25 years at the other end of the Capitol building, and it is certain that there will not be any lost or wasted motion about him, in getting started. His recent statement proves it.

Senator-elect Hull's statement is in reality a warning—to his own party.

It may be there is nothing but co-incidence in the fact that passage of the present Hawley-Smoot tariff law was followed by approximately a 30 per cent slump in America's export trade and by a tightening up of the already tightening times into the worst economic pinch, some say, in the country's history.

The Tennessee senator-elect, however, lays the export slump and the hard times principally to the Hawley-Smoot tariff and what especially irks him is the thought that its framers could not have squeaked it through congress (the representatives accepted it by a liberal margin but its prospects looked highly dubious in the senate for a while) if they had not had Democratic votes to help them.

Hull's warning to Democracy's leaders is that he will let their covers up what he considers their error (to give it its mildest name) by hush, hushing the tariff issue in the seventy-second congress.

Having probably forgotten fully as much about taxation principles as his fellow senators are likely to know, including the whole 95 of them, he threatens to be an awkward customer in debate in their legislative branch—where debate is encouraged, instead of being smothered, as in the house of representatives.

Today's Recipes

Noodle Ring.—One package fine noodles, three eggs, three-fourths teaspoon salt, dash white pepper, three-fourths cup milk, three tablespoons melted butter. Drop the noodles in boiling salted water and cook rapidly eight minutes, drain. Beat the egg yolks with the seasonings, add noodles, milk and melted butter. Sift two and one-half cups flour, three teaspoons baking powder and one-fourth teaspoon salt together and add alternately with one cup milk to the creamed mixture. Begin adding with the flour and finish with flour. Fold in the two egg whites, beaten until stiff. Bake in three greased and floured cake pans in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, for about 20 minutes.

Orange Filling.—Mix one-fourth cup sugar, one and one-half tablespoons flour and one-fourth teaspoon salt well in the top of a double-boiler, add two teaspoons butter and one beaten egg yolk. Cook until smooth and thick. Remove from the fire and add one teaspoon lemon juice. Spread between the layers while still warm.

Orange Frosting.—Cream three tablespoons butter till very light. Add two cups confectioner's sugar slowly, beating well between each addition. Add one tablespoon orange juice, grated rind and pulp of one-half small orange. Mix well and fold in one well-beaten white of egg.

PRACTICAL PRUDENCE

A young man took a girl for a ride in his new car. On a particularly deserted stretch of road the engine went dead.

While waiting for help the young man began to make love to his companion.

"My kisses," he said passionately, "will put new life into you."

"Then for goodness sake kiss the car," said the girl, "and let's get home."

Detective Work Needed

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The bodily condition known as allergy, which we have been discussing this week, is present in a good proportion of the population. Just what the percentage is has been variously reported. Hay fever, which is one form of it, occurs in these parts of the country where ragweed grows densely, in about five per cent of all persons. Food allergy is less common.

Searching into the fundamental causes of it, the most prominent thing is heredity. In 94 members of a certain family reported, it was found that four had asthma, 11 had hay fever, 15 had vasomotor nasal catarrh, 17 had attacks of hives, 14 had eczema and six a form of skin disease called angio-neurotic edema.

Such people may be sensitive to many different things. This one may have asthma when near horses. That one gets hives when he eats Brazil nuts. The other a dermatitis when in the presence of primroses. And the whole bunch may get itchy eyes and runny noses when the ragweed blooms on August 17.

Besides that, many unsuspected though familiar substances seem to cause such conditions. It often takes a good deal of detective work to uncover them. Such stories as this are common in the literature:

A woman said she noticed that she had asthma every time she had her watch cleaned. It was found she was allergic to boxwood dust which jewelers use to clean gold.

A school teacher had a mysterious dermatitis of the hands. It persisted in spite of the dietary restrictions. Finally it was found the condition was due to cinchona dust.

A stenographer had asthma beginning every afternoon at five o'clock when she quit work and lasting two hours. She never had it Sunday, nor during vacations. She was sensitive to the glue on envelope flaps when she mailed the letters at the end of the day.

Sometimes people are sensitive to many substances. Here is the report of a boy who was sensitive to codfish, cat hair, horse dander, orris powder, wheat and apple. How would you like to be in that poor kid's shoes?

But there is a ray of hope. When he went to Florida his asthma disappeared and he was able to eat anything he liked except fish. A little girl was sensitive to cat hairs, and also to wheat, oat, cashew and barley, but when she avoided cats she was free from asthma, no matter what she ate.

There is a lot about this subject we don't know yet. Especially it must be remembered that food (and other sensitizing substances such as dust and plants) are not the only cause of asthma, hives and eczema. Many cases of these diseases can never be proved to be due to allergy at all.

Keep Home For Babies

—By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE—

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am 18. Have been married about two years, six months. Have a little boy 18 months old and am expecting another this month.

"My husband goes out with other women all the time, and he knows that I know it. I have threatened to leave him if he didn't stop, but he doesn't care if I do.

"I love my husband and always will. I would leave and go home, but I have my children to think of. Please tell me what you would do.

A BROKEN HEARTED LITTLE MOTHER."

Well, it seems to me that a man who would run around with other women when he had a girl wife at home who loves him, and a baby and another coming, isn't much of a man and could be dispensed with, my dear. I suppose the secret of the matter is that you both married when you were children and he is tired of his responsibilities and wants to have his fling. YOU can't run around, even if you wanted to, because you are safely held at home with the babies. Women are handicapped that way. He can, so he does.

"What's to be done? If your husband is providing for you, and as you love him, I'd stay at home and wait until after the new baby comes and see how things work out. It may be he'll get tired of running around after awhile and, if you keep your little home together, he'll come to appreciate it and the little wife who loves him.

If he is not taking care of you, however, you had better go to your people, if you can. In any event, the law will make him provide for the babies; but, of course it is harder to enforce the law if you are away from him.

"MY DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I have been married for eight months and my husband tells me he loves me but never gives me any money and makes me stay home with mother and dad. He comes to see me twice a week.

"I'm very much in love with him. He says he loves me and wouldn't look at another girl, and at times he shows he cares. Please tell me what to do.

"PUZZLED FRANCES."

I would ask about his finances. Frances. You have a right to know what his prospects are. If you cannot find out, maybe your father could for you.

It may be that your husband is not working and has no way of supplying you with money and hates to tell you so. If he can support you, however, and fail to do so, you can sue him for non-support, if you care to do so.

NANCY: Your "heart goes hop, your heart goes thump" when you see this certain boy, does it, Nancy? I think you would be wiser to get out with others, but if it isn't natural for you to do so, why, be true to HIM. You are young. There is plenty of time for others later, if you don't marry this boy.

BROKEN HEARTED: Put your husband on probation. Broken Hearted. Tell him you will take him back for a time and see how he behaves, but will not stay with him unless he makes good.

Jennie Lee: A boy of 24 who drinks, tells lies and won't work is not apt to make a very good husband, my dear girl, even if he is a snappy dresser and treats you well when he is with you. I think you had better stay at home, even if your mother and you do not agree, and finish school. Really, I don't believe your mother means the things she says, do you? Isn't it merely the ravings of a nervous quick-tempered woman?

Wait until the boy asks for your picture before you give him one.

??? I don't think there are laws against second cousins marrying. First cousins are not prohibited, except in certain states. Ask your county clerk.

Care Will Retain Youth of Hands

—By GLADYS GLAD—

The woman who lavishes all her time and energy on the care of her face, and fails to give her hands a tumble, is decidedly not giving herself an even break. For soft, smooth, unlined hands are just as essential to an appearance of youthfulness as a soft, smooth complexion. And hands, when neglected, grow old and wrinkled just as the face does.

So many people would have you believe that no matter how young a woman's face and figure may appear, her hands will always betray her age. But this, in my opinion, is not true. You can't always tell a woman's age from her hands. A girl of 18 can have hands that look ages old. A woman of 50 can have hands that look like a young girl's.

Hands can age prematurely, just as can the face. And they can remain the velvety smoothness of youth long after the face has taken on the mask of age. The woman who has had her face rejuvenated by any of the advanced modern methods need not have oldish, crinkled hands. But if she has abused her hands for years, she cannot expect to restore to them youthful beauty in a week, a month, or perhaps even six months. It takes time to repair the damages that have resulted from years of neglect.

It is said that Sarah Bernhardt, at the time of her death (and she was more than 70 years old), had hands that were as soft and young as those of a girl in her teens. But the great Bernhardt always cared for her hands. She and Duse were two actresses who realized that hands may be as expressive as words. Few critics of either woman ever failed to note the beauty of their hands.

You cannot neglect your hands for months, for weeks, for even only a few days, and expect immediate results after one of two reconditioning treatments. If you sincerely desire beautiful hands, your care of them must be as continuous as the treatment you bestow upon your complexion.

Adjudged guilty of operating an auto while intoxicated, Katherine Jones, 31, colored, rear of 121 N. Race St., Springfield, was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to sixty days in jail by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Thursday afternoon. Charges of transporting and possessing liquor, also lodged against her, were dismissed by the court.

Dorothy Portis, 26, colored, of 343 Baltimore Place, Springfield, a companion of Katherine Jones at the time of her arrest by police here Wednesday afternoon, was found guilty of a charge of possessing liquor and fined $300 and costs. Both women were committed to jail.

The two women were arrested after a dilapidated coupe in which they were riding, driven by Katherine Jones, upset after colliding with two parked autos in front of the Greene County District Library, E. Church St.

Following a trail of footprints in the snow, police discovered a gallon can of whiskey which Dorothy Portis was alleged to have hidden in the undergrowth back of the library before officers arrived. Neither woman was injured.

THE GREATEST WONDERS

Dr. Philip Snowden says, "The greatest wonders are not material but spiritual. Facts of the spirit are as real as facts of matter and of infinitely higher value."

"Religion is as real as a railroad and will carry us farther even beyond this world into the infinite eternal world."

Jesus presented truths regarding activity in material things, the importance of holy communion and gave an example of the proper treatment of enemies.

V. 38. "Now as they went on their way, he entered into a certain village and a certain woman named Martha received him to her house. Jesus is ready to be welcomed to any home. He had no home of His own, yet His spirit is making all homes better."

V. 39. "And she had a sister called Mary, who also sat at the Lord's feet, and heard His word." Mary wanted to learn about Jesus; there is high hope for the one who will get close to the Lord.

V. 40. "But Martha was cumbered about much serving; and she came to him and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister did leave me to serve alone? Bid her, therefore, that she help me." Martha thought the only way to entertain a friend was to feed him; she overworked herself, worried to the point of distraction. She measured life by what she could do rather than what she was or might be.

V. 41. "But the Lord answered and said unto her, Martha, thou art anxious and troubled about many things." In loving terms Jesus corrected Martha's too great anxiety over material blessings.

V. 42. "But one thing is needful; for Mary hath chosen the good part, which shall not be taken from her." Christ taught that food for the soul is more important than food for the body. Here is an important teaching principle, viz., encouraging the good in others.

V. 43. "But woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and every herb and pass over justice and love of God; but these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." The censorious Pharisees were swift to threaten eternal woe upon anyone who neglected their silly requirements. Tithing is not discounted; judgment is pronounced against the lack of justice and love toward all men.

V. 43. "Woe unto you Pharisees! for ye love the chief seats in the synagogues and the salutations in the market places." Self importance, self praise, popularity, seeking positions and honor are condemned.

V. 44. "Woe unto you; for ye are as the tombs which appear not and the men that walk over them know it not." The inner wickedness and pollution of the Pharisees was hidden beneath a fair exterior.

V. 45. "And one of the lawyers answering saith unto him, teacher, in saying this thou reproachest us also." The lawyers were guilty of injustice and oppression and therefore in the same class with the Pharisees, hence all condemned; that might be not mistaken notion, Jesus replied, "Woe unto you lawyers, also, for ye load men with burdens grievous to be borne and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers."

V. 52. "The Pastor and Religious Education," by Munro, The Abingdon Press, presents the place of the pastor in the educational program of the church. The author, now director of adult work of the International Council of Religious Education is qualified to offer practical suggestions as a result of wide and varied experiences in this field.

"Girls Who Made Good," by Kirkland, Richard R. Smith, Inc., presents fifteen stories of well-known women who, have made good. The stories are written in an interesting, entertaining manner and will particularly appeal to girls in the teen age.

As an aid to the unemployment situation, Alfred L. Dupont is building an undenominational church near his home in Delaware. The building will cost $750,000, will have a tall tower and a chime of bells.

Mother Bernadine, a member of the congregation of the Holy Child Jesus, was one of the three foreigners recently, honored by the Japanese authorities at Osaka, Japan, for outstanding educational work in the city. She was the only non-Japanese presented to the emperor on his visit to Osaka in 1929.

Mother Bernadine has been in Japan for fifty-eight years. Sherwood Eddy, who "retired" from his work in the Y. M. C. A. recently because he had reached the age of 70, will now devote his energies to the advancement of socialism, Mr. Eddy says, "I have joined the socialist party and I intend to stay."

In the normal home the attitude that "anything is good enough for the children" will not exist; the child will have space to move about; he will learn much by finding out for himself how to do things. He will be given sufficient time in which to carry out his ideas.

In the normal home, there will be mutual cooperation and guided interests; the child will have privacy; all children will be treated with fairness; the clever ones will not be set up as examples; the physical, mental and religious care of the child will be given due attention by parents who are ever humble, patient and thoughtful, willing to learn lessons of value from the child.

The continuation of the human race and the highest possible development of our children are the supreme functions of mankind and the highest conception of the home is of a place where first

1. What are the strong and weak points in Martha's life?

2. What are the tests of friendship? What are the evidences of one's enemies?

3. Who are Christ's friends today? Who are his enemies?

4. Why does it take all kinds of people to make the world?

5. Explain the difference in the attitude of Jesus toward his friends and his enemies.

6. How be appreciative and just toward those who differ from us? Clericus says, "Bustle is never the test of true efficiency. Faith never hinders wise service. The Marys are always the best housewives because they take time to commune with God. There is no gain for the life that now is in following the example of the restless, carefied, ever-anxious impatient Martha."

How secure and maintain a large Sunday evening church service?

This is one of the common questions heard everywhere. Many different answers have been given. One that has proven successful is given by Dr. James Carter. His plan is to enlist art; he secured many small prints from the Perry Picture Co., Malden, Mass., and thus continuing the influence of both picture and sermon. The popularity of such sermons and art presentations was demonstrated by continually increasing attendance at the evening services.

MAD LAUGHTER.

A THRILLING MYSTERY STORY + by MILES BURTON

CHAPTER 35
Dick traveled up to London next day. He was fully determined that he would not again commit the error of undertaking any independent investigation. He had failed rather conspicuously once already, and there seemed no reason to suppose that he would be successful at a second attempt.

He entered Sir Edric's room with a smile, and sat down in a chair beside the Assistant Commissioner's desk. Sir Edric looked tired and worried, but greeted Dick with his accustomed cheerfulness. "It's very good of you to come up so promptly, Dick," he said. "I hated to call you away but I think it possible that you may be able to help me."

"I gather that I am not to be arrested for the theft of the Maharajah's jewels?" replied Dick with a smile.

"No, you seem to be cleared on that charge," said Sir Edric. "Your theory of the door-knob seems to be correct. We failed to find your fingerprints in the house on Creek Street, and the experts have come to the conclusion that the impression on the door-knob was made some days before Pollard found it. Even he is prepared to admit your innocence, rather reluctantly, though, I'm afraid. What weighs most with him is that another crime has been committed, while you were safely at Leinster Hall."

"He took good care that I shouldn't need there without his knowledge," commented Dick. "Dr. Weatherleigh was quite disturbed at the continued presence of the village policeman. But what's this new crime? Has our old friend the Funny Toff been exercising the brains of the police once more?"

"He has, and that is what I wanted to talk to you about," replied Sir Edric. "I'll describe his latest exploit to you, as far as we know it at present. In the first place, do you know Hatton Garden? It is a street running northwards from Holborn Circus, at the corner of Gamage's, roughly parallel to the Farringford Road."

"I think I've been there once," said Dick. "It didn't strike me as being a particularly enlivening thoroughfare."

"It isn't," agreed Sir Edric. "I spent yesterday morning there, and I know. It is, however, as you probably know, the home of wholesale jewelers, diamond merchants, and people like that. Amongst these are Secombe & Armitage, a firm of diamond merchants, whose premises are at the corner of Hatton Garden and Ely Street, on the left-hand side as you go up."

"Now, next door to this place, in Ely Street, is a rather ramshackle sort of building, with a yard behind it. This building has been divided up. The ground floor is a tob

The Theater

"The American theater is just at the turning point and is about to come into its own—and the movies have helped most."

So says Katherine Cornell, Broadway's only actress-manager. "The talkies have whetted the appetite of the public," she said. "They see the actors and actresses from the stage and want to see them in the flesh. The movies—and perhaps the radio—are making people more alive. And when people are alive they go to the theater."

"It may be that the theater will eventually have only a small public but it will be a solid theater—educated group, sensitive to emotional light and shade. It will make for more beauty in plays."

The new first lady of Broadway has combined her stardom with the personal management of "The Barrets of Wimpole Street." It is a story of the courtship of

BARBARA STANWYCK

Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning, the poet and Miss Cornell has made it intelligently sentimental.

"We are in a sentimental age," she says. "Manners and feelings are coming back supplanting the post-war realism and the I-don't-care attitude. When long dresses came in the hoydenish type of girl went out. Perhaps that shows the dressmaker's influence on life and the theater. And with this change, it is now possible to show that love is more than a chemical reaction. The public is learning to feel inside instead of only on the outside."

Miss Cornell's husband, Guthrie McClintic directs her and takes most of the managerial details from her shoulders. But he is going to Hollywood to resume direction of Fox pictures. "I won't say I shall never go in the talkies but at present I am thinking only theater," she says.

Warners continue their drive to sign up as many stars as possible. They have just put Barbara Stanwyck under a long-term contract and will feature her along with William Powell, Ruth Chatterton, Ray Francis and other newly acquired stars.

There seems to be a conflict between Warners and Columbia over Miss Stanwyck. She has had wardrobe fittings and is scheduled to start "The Miracle Woman" at Columbia but is slated to start "Night Nurse" for Warners a day later. She also still has two more pictures to make for Columbia under her contract.

In private life Barbara Stanwyck is Mrs. Frank Fay. She came from the stage to the talkies and made her first screen hit last year in Columbia's "Ladies of Leisure". Her latest is "Illie!".

Earl Derr Biggers will not have to write an original Charlie Chan story for Fox in which Warner Oland will play the part of the Chinese-Hawaiian detective. "The Black Camel" has been chosen as next vehicle in this series. The author may help with the adaptation.

Charles Read, a student at Denison, is home on a short visit.

It is moving time in Greene County and just now the country roads are lined with wagons loaded with the household goods of moving farmers.

Prospects for the location of a large auto truck factory in Xenia in the near future are encouraging.

Charles Read, a student at Denison, is home on a short visit.

ISSUE PUSHED INTO OPEN THROUGH PLAN OFFERED BY RASKOB

For one thing, it developed that if the Southern dries decide to rally behind any candidate at all that candidate probably will be Senator Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, who was Al Smith's running mate in 1928.

Senator Robinson, who loyally supported Smith three years ago—even to his attitude against prohibition—proved the surprise of the meeting. Not only did he vigorously object to prohibition being injected into the session, but he exceeded even such radical dries as Senator Morrison of North Carolina, in his assault on the Smith-Raskob control of the party machinery, and his championship of the dry side.

There was a Bryan-esque touch to his dramatic assertion:

"You shall not pin upon the emblem of the Democratic party the skull and cross bones of an outlawed traitor!"

Hitherto Robinson has been regarded as rather a neutral in the fierce prohibition conflict that has raged in the party. But from today on he probably will be regarded as the leader of the Southern dry wing of the party.

Smith's activity in pushing forward the issue left a curious trail of speculation as to his own future status. Some of the committee members went away from Washington convinced that "Al" is to be a receptive candidate for the nomination next year, despite the belief of his close friends that he is "out of it."

On the other hand, his intimates assert that his one burning ambition is to see the principles which he espoused in 1928—including a change in the prohibition laws—emerge triumphant in 1932. To this end, they assert, Smith is unwilling to completely and publicly eliminate himself at this time for the reason that such action would also cost him whatever influence he has in the party councils. Until the Democrats name another candidate for the presidency, Smith is the titular leader of the party with an influential voice in party affairs.

That there is a real and definite split between Smith and Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt is no longer doubted by those intimately acquainted with party matters. In the preliminary conflict over whether prohibition was to be injected into the meeting of the national committee here, Governor Roosevelt lined up with the southern dries who were opposing the Smith-Raskob program.

Roosevelt's friends almost openly accuse Chairman Raskob, and inferentially his close friend, Smith, of being inimical to the Roosevelt candidacy.

What this will develop into in the next sixteen months, and the bearing it will have on the fortunes of other candidates, Owen D. Young, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, and others, only the future can tell.

XENIA GIRL CHOSEN FOR CHORUS

Miss Naomi Henkel Will Sing In Huge High School Group At Des Moines, Ia.

MISS Naomi Henkel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Henkel 648 N. King St., has been selected as a member of the 1931 North Central Chorus which will sing at the North Central Music Supervisors' Conference at Des Moines, Iowa the second week in April.

The chorus will assemble Monday morning, April 13 and five days of intensive training will follow. Friday night, April 17, the chorus of three hundred talented singers from the high schools of the North Central states will present a concert jointly with the North Central Orchestra. The chorus will be conducted by Dr. John Pinley Williams, founder and conductor of the world famous Westminster Choir of Ithaca, N. Y., formerly of Dayton.

The chorus is organized to serve as an object lesson by a master teacher conductor in the educational values of choral music, to stimulate the use of choral music of only the highest standards, to demonstrate and inculcate the standards and qualifications of the ideal chorist, and in general to stimulate the advancement of choral art as an educational subject in every school and as a cultural pursuit in every community of the North Central states.

It is believed that Miss Henkel is the only representative from Ohio in the chorus. She possesses a beautiful soprano voice and has been a pupil of William Hugh Miller, public school music teacher, for the past two years. Miss Henkel is a member of the junior class of Central High School and has been a member of the High School Glee Club for two years. She sang the leading part in the "Lass of Limerick Town," senior high operetta last fall and has also appeared on a number of programs recently resulting in much favorable comment.
